FOREWORD

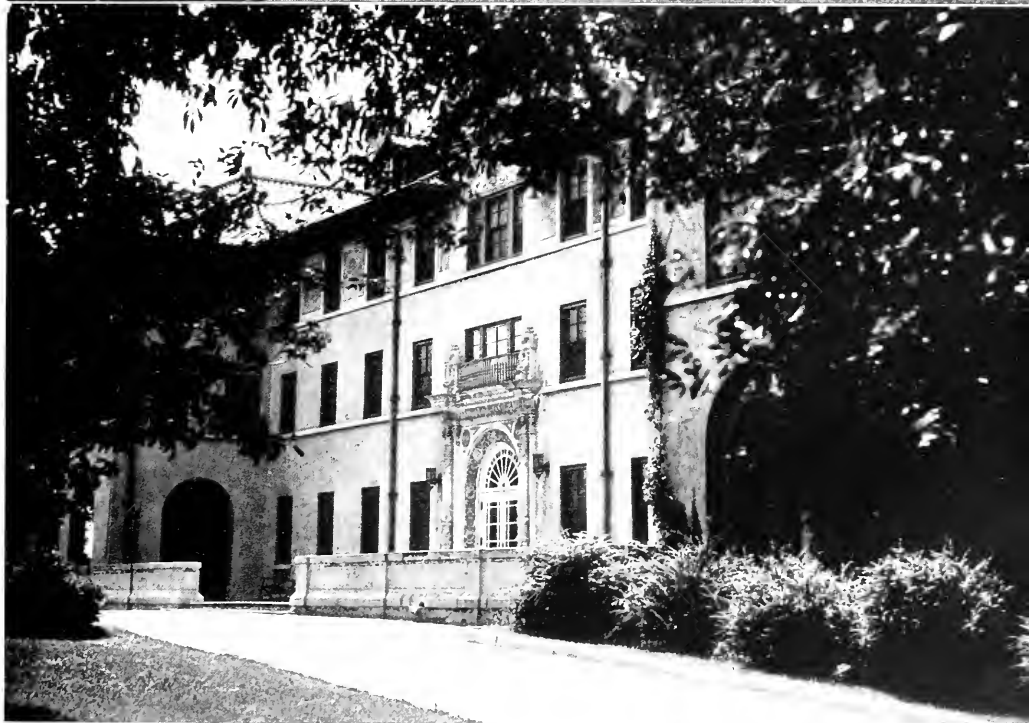

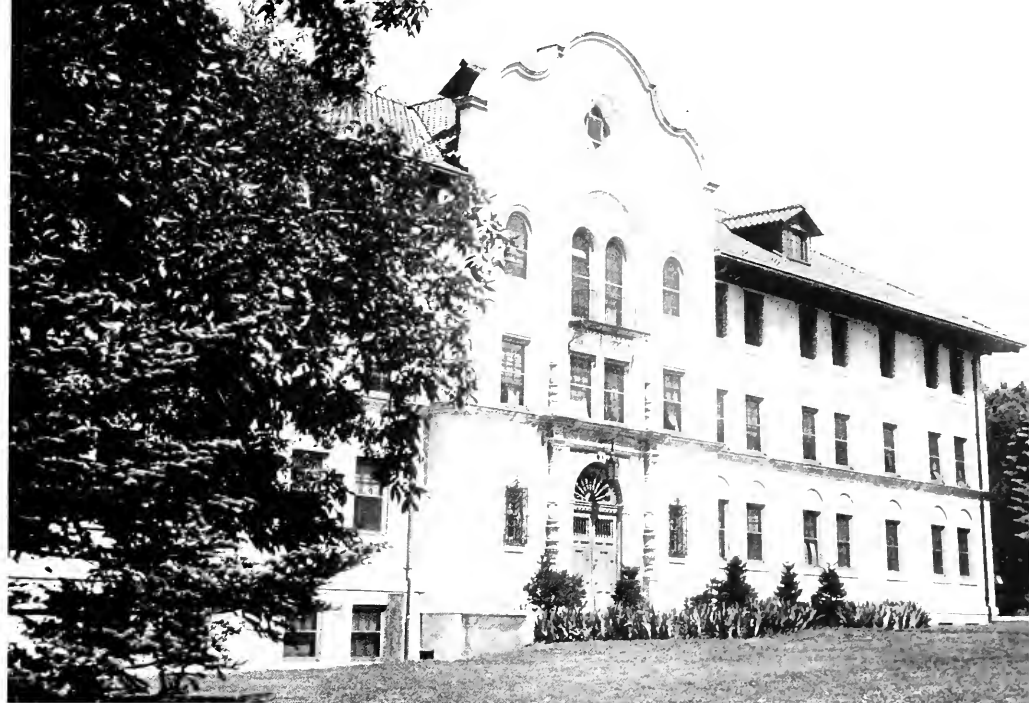

"What is America? Some people think it's a dollar sign with a halo over it, or an adding machine and the Brooklyn Dodgers, a skyscraper with the moon hanging over it like a for-rent sign, an A on a quiz, a college football game, a Senate and an Agora feud . . . These are only the window trimmings. America is an Idea and the U.S.A. a dream . . ."

Today that Idea, that Dream is calling for our help. And Montclair is answering as it sees fit . . . Administration and alumni working to carry on high educational standards, faculty and students pitching in defense programs, Montclair boys fighting in the armed forces, thinkers searching for Truths for a future enduring peace . . .

We of Montclair will prove that Freedom can, should, and will endure.

DR. HARRY A. SPRAGUE

PRESIDENT

You are looking forward with pride and pleasure to your commencement—the day when trained and competent persons as students march up, over, and away—and then as graduates march on against challenging problems related to education and democracy. Never has the work of the teacher been so inspiring, for never have we had a greater opportunity for service and leadership. In this situation, may we demonstrate the hypothesis that the objectives and practices of our schools determine to a great degree the efficiency and morale of our people in a crisis and also the character of our civilization during the post-war period. Implementing this hypothesis, teachers may gain great joy and satisfaction through service in both war and peace. May these achievements be yours.

HARRY A. SPRAGUE.

CLASS OF 1942

*And though in after years, our fate may tear us far
apart . . .*

DR.
HARRY G. CAYLEY

ADVISER

"Sorry, I'm new here myself." Dr. Cayley joined our English faculty in 1938 (the same year we marched in as freshmen) and soon consented to be our class adviser.

"That can't be the one and same prof!" Strolling around campus in a long, black professorial cape . . . "Now you see the real meaning of Life and Love . . .", expounding philosophy to discerning upperclassmen . . . "In surrealism and non-objectivity you find . . .", exploring new art forms for absorbing frosh . . . Whamming the ball over the net, coaching novices and stars . . . Attempting all types of photography and development in the dark-room . . . "Ah, So . . . Tilting the cut gives . . .", making art functional in the yearbook realm . . . "But your cover must express an Idea—", along with Mr. Karp, inspiring editors to break away from meaningless tradition . . .

Yes, this is the Doc as we have known him in the classroom, around campus, and in the dorm.

CLASS OFFICERS

When the class of '42 entered Montclair, there was talk of their being the last class to graduate in four years because a five-year course was being considered. Little did anyone think that they would be the last class to graduate before an accelerated three-year program was installed. No one would have prophesied that this class would be the first to have its number lessened by selective service, or to have the student-teaching period shortened to ten weeks to make possible the first May-time commencement.

The one distinction the class of '42 expected to enjoy and which materialized was that of having the first class of business majors. But there are other factors for which this group of seniors will be remembered. They were always the class to go more than halfway in helping their members attend their social functions, and they were the first to integrate themselves by means of a class paper, Footnotes of '42.

Thus a combination of time as well as personalities once again combine to give another graduating class its individuality.

Those cracks from the corner during a Senate meeting, much hammering in the stage crew, a selling salestalk for Bam's shoes, a ready source of a cigarette in the rec room—all these tell of the presence of Charlie. That thick bookbag isn't all for effect either. It's full of Gage books, Folsom reports, or tricky math problems.

BUSINESS EDUCATION MAJORS

FRANCIS R. GEIGLE,
Head of Business Education Department.

This year the first class of majors in business education will be graduated. The major in business education constitutes a broad training in bookkeeping and accounting and the social-business subjects.

Mr. Geigle, head of the business department, has had this particular class in most of the business courses. Naturally, such a long and close association has fostered a strong feeling between the teacher and his students. Needless to say, the teacher will miss his class. Mr. Geigle and the class will cherish the association and the incidents (especially a certain letter), and will have many happy recollections of their experiences together.

Because of their successful practice teaching experience, Mr. Geigle sees a promising future for his class. Let us also wish them well, these classmates of ours who will bring to a new field the high standards of Montclair.

FIRST ROW: Sale; Cicchino, T.; Cohen; Daniels.
SECOND ROW: Mr. Geigle; De Vita; Scardilli;

JUNIORS

Carrying out the "big brother and sister" tradition, the Juniors welcomed the Freshmen into the MSTC fold with a tea for the newcomers during the first week of school. An informal atmosphere prevailed due to the fact that the Juniors had become acquainted with their little brothers and sisters during the summer via letters or visits. Then the class of '43 turned to its social calendar, and ushered in Hallowe'en with a dance and costume party open to the entire student body.

At the midway mark of the school year, the class social committee provided an enjoyable evening with the class informal party, followed by the impressive annual Junior-Senior formal. The climax of the year came with the Junior Prom which brought the year's social events to a successful close.

SOPHOMORES

As lordly sophomores, the class of '44 returned to the campus, primarily interested in being on the giving-end of the initiation. Name tags were worn to inform the Frosh which "Miss" or "Mister" they were addressing when they proffered the required matches and lifesavers to the demanding upper classmen.

However, hostilities ceased with the traditional Frosh-Soph Peace dance, which gratifyingly turned out to be one of MSTC's best. With this successful start, the class began to make plans for the rest of the year.

The informal class party partially broke the shock of coming back to work after the Christmas holidays, while March winds blew in the traditional Soph Hop. The ending advent of warmer weather brought forth the first picnic of the class of '44.

FRESHMEN

Our first week at Montclair was shadowed by the traditional hazing at the hands of our sophomore superiors. But the friendliness of our Junior Big Brothers and Big Sisters soon persuaded us to bear the lowly yoke.

When we formally organized as a class, we elected Mr. Conrad as our adviser; then Ray Stevens, President; Ruth Mather, Vice-President; Katherine Perrine, Secretary; John O'Brien, Treasurer; and Marshall Brown, our SGA Representative.

Later we made peace with the sophomores, and we had a party to celebrate. We continued on our own social program with a Christmas party. On February 6 we went to our Freshman Formal which we believed to be the highlight of the year.

There were many things to keep us busy — buying, renting, and borrowing books; learning our way around campus; trying out for Players and Choir; and getting on the publications. Of course, Civ. and Cit., Music Appreciation, Freshman Science, and World Lit. are things we shall never forget! Nevertheless, all of us feel that we have found a place in the activities and life at Montclair and that our remaining years will be spent as happily and as profitably as our freshman year.

CHAPIN HALL

Dorm life in Chapin may best be exemplified by contentment and harmony among its residents.

With the onset of the new "men-era" in Chapin, there has been considerable amendment and modification of the existent rules. Each new contingency has been met in such a manner that nothing but highly successful can typify present conditions of the co-ed experiment.

The living room of Chapin seems to be in use constantly, both as a social center for dormitory residents and a reception room for all during the day.

The highlight of activities during the day is the gala Dorm formal held in November. Dorm activity is at key pitch during this festivity. This affair is complimented by such occasions as the informal dance and a party for the seniors, held sometime after the culmination of their practice teaching.

For another college year, Russ, home to more than one hundred Montclair coeds, was the scene of many unforgettable happy days.

Sophomores and juniors welcomed forty-eight freshmen into dorm life with a spirited initiation and a dignified reception. With studies well under pursuit, everyone anticipated the special dance of the year, the Dorm Formal. Shortly after that grand evening, our Thanksgiving Dinner brought an encore for formal attire.

Traditionally, everyone joined in the jolly old English Christmas celebration and dinner. Then, what fun carolling one hundred strong. Eddy Russ glowed with merriment all night.

Pajama parties, dancing, and bridge were featured among Russ' activities and continued through the Spring. Defense work has also had its place this year in the dorm. Privileges were extended considerably with the adoption of a new dormitory constitution.

The Student Government Association, organized as a corporation to administer the funds and activities on campus in so far as student activity is concerned, operates under the governorship of the Board of Trustees.

Each of the four classes is represented on the board, which also has officers selected from the student body. The activities of the board, consisting of the granting of budget appropriations, approving charters and sponsoring worthwhile events about campus, are effected through a group of standing committees.

One of the most prominent committees is the social committee. Each year it fosters the scheduling of affairs for the student body. This year it backed a hayride and was co-sponsor with several of the clubs in small social events. It also presents the annual SGA Formal at the start of the year.

The assembly committee cooperates with the administration in scheduling programs for the students' benefit and enjoyment. The Freshman orientation committee coordinates activities providing for freshman initiation, "big brother and sister" program and other activities. Financial affairs of organizations receiving the aid of the SGA are supervised by the financial committee. Care of the building and grounds and the operation of an amplifying and public address system also fall within the jurisdiction of the standing committees.

Agora, a society for men at MSTC, promotes good fellowship for its members through college years and later life. Membership, which is limited to thirty men students selected for outstanding personality, is by invitation.

The college knows Agora for its initiation during which the pledges wear unusual paraphernalia and indulge in strange antics. Typically Agorian, also, is the "dormitory serenade" after the evening meetings.

Heading the list of activities is the annual Agora banquet, which is open to all the men of the college. Open house, held for members and their guests immediately after Christmas recess, and the Senior Farewell banquet in honor of the senior members, complete the major events of the season.

Monday, finger painting; Tuesday, life class, oils, water-colors; Wednesday, pastels; and so on through the entire week. This bustling activity is typical of Artsmen's program. Since members have a lively interest in art, club activities consist of field trips, outside speakers, art classes, and discussions. One committee spent hours at work in creating a mural with an amphitheater scene for a corner in the library.

CHORAL SPEAKING

Choral Speaking is the youngest of the college clubs, but it is growing with leaps and bounds. Members of the club are divided into three voice groups—high, medium, and low. Each group prepares some selection for the regular monthly program. At the meetings, new work is practiced with the entire membership. Activities this year included an assembly program and a program presented in collaboration with the Speech Workshop and Dance Club.

CLASSICAL CLUB

Latin songs, speakers, discussions, and Latin games are some of the activities of Classical Club. This club, of Latin majors and minors, tries to provide extracurricular experience for its members which may be of professional use. During the year, the club sponsors a Roman banquet, a Christmas program, and takes an active part in the International Cabaret and the annual Language Festival.

CLIO

Clio is an honorary organization for women social studies majors. The club, which meets the first Tuesday of every month, discusses some of the outstanding social and economic problems of the present day. Guest speakers at the meetings are persons who are authorities on problems relating to the social studies field.

COMMERCIAL CLUB

The social program of Commercial Club brings together business majors and minors in an informal atmosphere of fun and good fellowship, when spelling matches and other games are adapted to the commercial field for the club's entertainment. At the monthly meetings, members relate and discuss their experiences in part-time business positions. Prominent business men are frequently invited to speak to the group.

CREATIVE WRITING

Montclairites with embryonic talent for writing have the benefit of unprejudiced criticism at the Creative Writing Club, directed by Lawrence H. Conrad. At the club round table a question period and reading of manuscripts without revealing of the author's name take place. After a year of discussion and constructive criticism advanced by the fellow members and Mr. Conrad, the writers have obtained a good perspective on their work.

Barefooted, gown-clad girls twist and turn, bend and stretch many afternoons during the year while practicing the fundamentals of creative dancing. On Tuesday evenings a select few from the club go in for more advanced work. Their antics at times seem strange, but the results they turn out each spring in the form of the well-recognized recital prove there is "method to their madness," for all their actions fit together and tell a story. This year, Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" was depicted as the main feature of the recital. The girls create all the dances themselves while Walter Muller, pianist of the club, arranges the musical score.

DEBATING

Debating club's contribution to extracurricular activities at MSTC this year was the formation of a series of inter-class debates. Members of the club coached applicants from the four classes of the college, and selected the class teams. As usual, league debates were held by the varsity team which met with representatives of nearby colleges.

FORUM

Organized only a few years ago, Forum has grown in student interest over this brief period. A peak in program activity was reached this fall when two state labor leaders spoke to one of the largest audiences ever assembled by the club. Each year a forum on world religion is usually held.

The Italian club, attempting to keep alive Italian culture, provides an outlet for the interests of those with Italian background. At its meetings the members participate in songs and dances of Italy which are used in the annual Cabaret and the Spring Festival of the Language Department.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Crucial events that made world history this year provided I.R.C. with extraordinarily vital topics of discussion, since it is their purpose to study the political happenings among nations. They also make an annual trip to International House of Columbia University, and hold on campus a conference for high schools of northern New Jersey.

THE PLAYERS

Powder-puffing make-up groups, satin-draping costume designers, professional carpenters and electricians, and Lady Macbeth sleep-walking thespians—this is Players, probably the most active organization on campus. Among its many activities were the workshop classes held once a week throughout the first semester, monthly meeting programs, and Drama Day sponsored for high school dramatic clubs which took place in May.

The outstanding event of the year was the sponsoring of the production of Paul Green's The House of Connelly by the Carolina Playmakers, a dramatic group from the University of North Carolina.

POETRY CLUB

Poetry Club, the meat of the poetry lover's diet, provides an opportunity for those with a common interest in poetry to share its appreciation. This year the club participated with Mr. Nickerson in radio broadcasts over station WPAT, Paterson, published the Cygnet, the annual anthology of high school poetry, and travelled to Mendham to spread their enjoyment of poetry to a group of orphans.

PRO MUSICA

Pro Musica brings together instrumentalists and vocalists desirous of the best in music and provides an opportunity for further study in special fields of musical interest. Outstanding on this year's program were speakers on music as a vocation, a program presented for St. Anne's School, amateur composers' night, Open House, and a concert of instrumental and vocal selections presented by members for invited guests.

Field trips to New Jersey state institutions and other places of interest are organized throughout the year. This year the officers of the club are also the officers of the New Jersey Association of Psychology Clubs, whose annual meeting was held at MSTC in May.

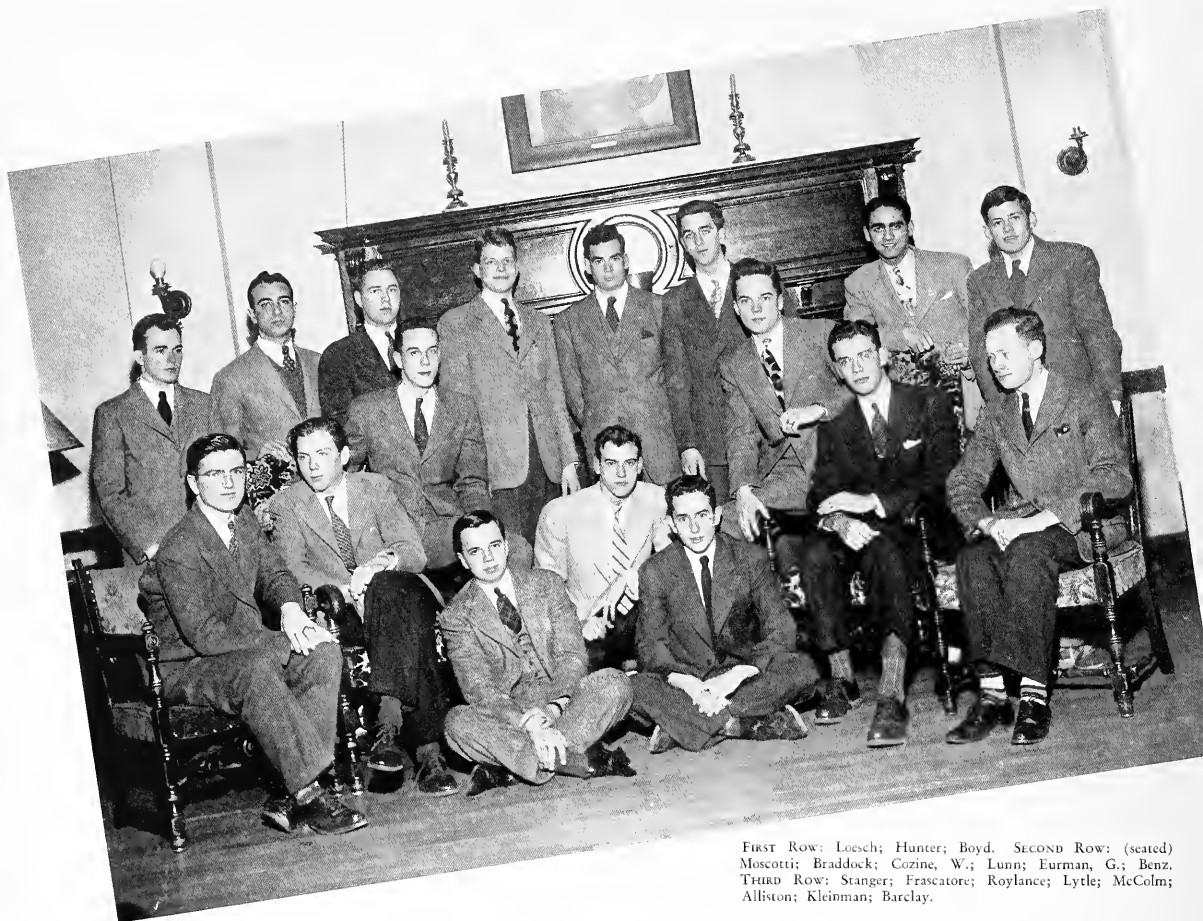

SCIENCE CLUB

As a medium for the presentation of special science topics, Science Club gives its members the opportunity for training in scientific procedure and thought. Membership is limited to students who have achieved an "A" or "B" ranking for one term of any four-point science course. Well-known speakers in the fields of science are guests at general meetings.

SENATE

An honorary men's organization, the oldest on campus, Senate strives through its activities to develop cultural and social interests among its members and fellow students at MSTC. Each year Senate has an open picnic, usually attends two theater productions, and makes several visits to nearby art galleries, museums, and colleges. Business meetings are held the afternoon of the social gathering. The evening meetings at Mr. Bohn's home are conducted by members of Senate, who lead the discussions on topics of common interest to the other members of the organization. Art, music, politics, science, philosophy and other vital subjects run the gauntlet of the discussions.

SIGMA PHI MU

Math Club furthers an interest in mathematics and gives an opportunity for its members to study those phases of the subject not usually taught in the classroom. They foster a "fun with figures" attitude. The club Christmas tree decorated with bright polyhedrons has become a tradition. Special activities during the year include joint meetings with N.J.C. and Rutgers, and with Apheston, Science and Commercial Clubs of the college.

Y LEADERS

Y-Leaders club, for the first time chartered under the SGA, has been active for several years with boys' groups operating at the Montclair YMCA. Volunteers from the men of the college meet these groups and conduct a varied program which provides them with teaching experience. Supper discussion meetings are held on alternate Mondays and the year's activities are culminated by a steak dinner.

KAPPA DELTA PI

Each fall, hearty congratulations are extended to the twenty juniors and fifteen seniors who are elected to membership in Kappa Delta Pi, for this highest of Montclair's honorary societies not only recognizes high scholastic standing, but also professional enthusiasm and sincere devotion to education. The second largest national honorary society, KDP established the Gamma Epsilon chapter at Montclair in 1931 to maintain and encourage professional growth. Among its traditional and unique activities is the annual Coffee House meeting which is held each spring to revive the atmosphere of the old English institution.

ALDORNIA

Aldornia, honorary English society, studies each year some phase of literature or life which is not readily available in the college program. This year's program concerned the Thirty School Experiment. The general theme was "The English Curriculum in Transition." Books on the teaching of creative writing, visual arts, and the reorganizing secondary education were included.

After the formal meetings of the group, humorous contributions are read for "Ainrodla," the unpublished magazine of the society.

Of course, everyone knows about Algernon Q. Andiron, the official mascot of the society who writes the records of the Aldornia meetings.

The club holds an alumni meeting in December, and a banquet for the induction of new members in May.

One of the outstanding events of this year was the assembly on February 5 when Aldornia presented its guest, Jesse Stuart. Mr. Stuart, who is a well known American poet and short story writer, he related many of his experiences that he had in the South. He was a stimulating personality and we will not forget the interesting discussion we had with him at tea that afternoon.

APHESTEON

Aphesteon, honorary organization for junior and senior mathematic majors, provides an outlet for interest in advanced mathematics and encourages the most capable students to do extended, individual research in the field of mathematics.

A conference of math clubs, held in conjunction with Sigma Phi Mu, forms a friendly relationship between the mathematics clubs of Rutgers, Upsala, New Jersey College for Women, and Montclair.

General meetings, open to alumni members, provide guest speakers and discussions by members. With the junior members as hosts, the January meeting is given over to a party for the seniors before they leave for the student teaching period. Open House for all math majors is held in April. At the last meeting of the year, a farewell party is given in honor of the seniors.

ROHWEC

Rohwec, honorary social studies society, started off the events of the school year with the welcoming tea for freshmen, held in September. October was the month of the informal initiation meeting followed by the formal induction held at the Rohwec banquet in November. A special meeting of "tips for seniors" was given during the practice-teaching period to aid the seniors of the school studies department in solving their problems. Later in the year, Open House brought together all social studies students.

At Rohwec Banquet, the club presented its second annual Rohwec award to Michael Gatti of the class of 1935, now teaching in the Springfield Regional High School. This award is made annually to the teacher graduated from Montclair for at least five years, who is doing the most outstanding work in the field of social studies.

ORCHESTRA

The strains of the works of the great composers, rehearsed tirelessly at weekly meetings, heralded the approach of another concert to be given by the College Symphony Orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Emil Kahn, former conductor of the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra at Stuttgart, Germany. These concerts included this year the two Christmas concerts, a highly received one at the Newark Athletic Club, and Spring performances. In addition to these events are the programs given for the student body of Montclair and for students in the high schools of the state.

BAND

Red and white uniforms, shiny instruments, and plenty of practice combine to form Montclair's band. This organization not only provides music at football games and pep rallies, but also parades and creates formations representative of the college. This year a flashlight formation at the night games was the novelty. The Band also presents a Spring concert and Band Show. The latter has become one of the greatest crowd-drawing events on campus, largely due to the untiring efforts of Mr. Guerrero, conductor, whose enthusiasm spurred on the interest of its members.

COLLEGE CHOIR

The College Choir, with its fine reputation as an a cappella choir, is probably better known off campus than any other organization of the college.

During the past year, the Choir sang at assembly programs on campus and at various high schools throughout the state. It also presented programs at the Montclair Women's Club and similar organizations.

This year, Montclair musical organizations were particularly honored by being asked to participate in the traditional University Night at the Newark Athletic Club. The Choir sang Christmas songs and a repertoire of old-time favorites which were enthusiastically received.

PUBLICATIONS COUNCIL

Designed to function as a supervisory body for all of the publications of the college, the Bureau of Publications is formed by a representative group of editors and business managers.

La Campana, annual, the Montclarion, newspaper and the Quarterly, magazine, have representatives. The officers are a director and a treasurer. Each year the Bureau submits a general budget for all of its organizations. During the year it conducts the mechanical business of ordering supplies and supervising the expenditures of the publications.

LA CAMPANA

MEMO TO LA CAMPANA STAFF:

"If we had to do it over again," would things be the same for the Book of the Year, La Campana for 1942? Finding the most super yearbook company, "interviewing" aspiring staff members, rescuing the photographer locked in the dark room, "turning our bodies to the left please and smiling with the lips closed," mad scrambling to meet deadlines, looking at page layouts from all angles with Dr. Cayley and Mr. Karp, and creating the perfect cover are among the joyous things that go into the making of any yearbook. We'd like to apologize for and forget our seemingly-serious disagreements and shortcomings when things (and our nerves) were at a peak and deadlines were impending . . .

MONTCLARION

The Montclarion, weekly newspaper of the College, serves not only the college as a whole, but also trains the members of the staff as future teachers of journalism through actual practice. Under the policy initiated last Spring by Ann Demovic the Montclarion has undergone a face-lifting with a change of paper, nameplate, and types. Further experimentation has been carried on this Spring by Howard Roylance in making possible a weekly of half the present size. Each year the Montclarion plays host to the North Jersey Scholastic Press Association of high school papers.

MONTCLAIR QUARTERLY

Quarterly, the college magazine, consists of articles on many varied subjects, poetry, dramas, and short stories, written by the members of the student body and illustrated and edited by the Quarterly staff. This year again the magazine was published four times during the school year. In addition to presenting to the student body outstanding contributions, the Quarterly also provides actual experience for members of the staff in literary criticism.

TRIBE

When Tribe backs an athletic event, that event is almost certain of success. It holds its meetings the first Tuesday of every month in the Chapin living room. Here it lays plans for such affairs as the Tribe dance, the Tribe alumni banquet, the winter sports carnival, and pep rallies. Two of its more basic projects are an annual gift to the school and an alumni scholarship fund.

The Men's Athletic Commission, composed of Coach Chester Pittser, Dr. Harley Milstead, and two students appointed by the Board of Trustees, enjoys an influential position in directing and forming the athletic policy of the school. They have the final choice about arranging schedules and deciding upon the competition for the various sports in which Montclair participates.

As a progressive body it went ahead and sponsored the night football program which was so successful last fall. Unless prevented by unforeseen circumstances, the Men's Athletic Commission plans to have night football again next year.

GOLD M'S

BIG M'S

The gold M is the highest award of the W.A.A., presented to senior girls. The honor indicates that the winners were active for ten seasons out of twelve and participated in at least three different sports during their college career. Barbara Burgess and Virginia Florin were the only two winners this year.

W.A.A. also awards a felt shield for participation in three seasons of any one sport. A large felt M represents three shields.

WOMEN'S ATHLETIC COUNCIL

The W.A.A. Council is the backbone of all of the extracurricular athletic activities for the girls of Montclair. Play-days are arranged and tournaments drawn up for the participants in all sports by the members of the Council. Two major activities this year were the Intercollegiate Play-day in the Spring and the W.A.A. banquet in May.

FOOTBALL

In spite of injuries to key men, Montclair's Tribesmen did well this year winning five games and losing four of the second nine-game schedule in their history. Night football was also introduced and was successful enough to warrant the arrangement of night games for next year.

The campaign got under way with two unsuccessful invasions of New England, losing to Norwich University of Vermont, and to American International College of Springfield, Mass.

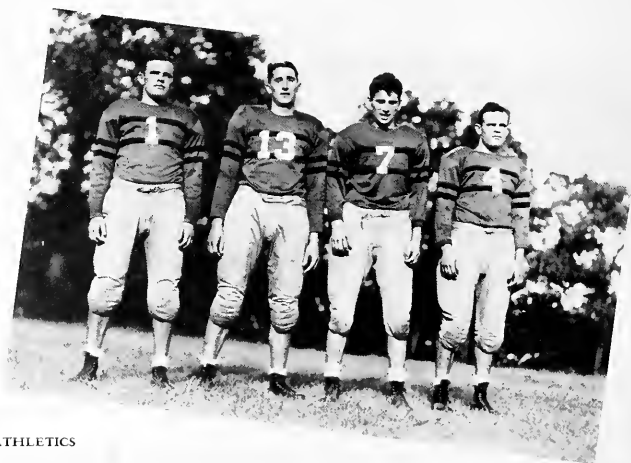

The Indians then returned to Sprague Field to take two arclight thrillers from Hofstra and Millersville. They reached their peak the following week against Wagner when they came from behind twice to win 27-15.

Montclair lost its most exciting game as East Stroudsburg prevailed 14-13 by a fourth period extra point in the last night game of the season.

The season was deadlocked at four and four when Montclair beat Arnold but lost to New Britain. The Indians then assured themselves of a favorable balance for the year by massacring Trenton 59-7, the most top-heavy score ever recorded by a Montclair eleven.

BASKETBALL

The Montclair basketball team this year was a strange mixture of invincibility at home and impotence on the road. Toward the end of the season, however, the Tribe was winning wherever it played in its own class.

The calibre of the opposition this year was the strongest ever scheduled, including L.I.U., N.Y.U., St. Johns, C.C.N.Y., Brooklyn College, and Manhattan.

Representing Montclair was the smallest but scrappiest squad in a good many years. All but one of the starters were under six feet tall. But they performed more successfully than their immediate predecessors by winning twelve times and losing eleven.

The highest scorer of them all was also the small junior Frank Steinitz. Steinitz captained the team from a forward post and racked up a total of 270 points, more possibly than any single college player in New Jersey.

Joe Grosch, junior, George "Casey" McNally, sophomore, Bill Dice, sophomore, and Ben Wojtas, freshman, were the other rarin' members of the court combine. Grosch is certain to be back for the first half of next year because of his admission into the U. S. naval reserves. Stan Wnek, a reserve, is also in the Reserves.

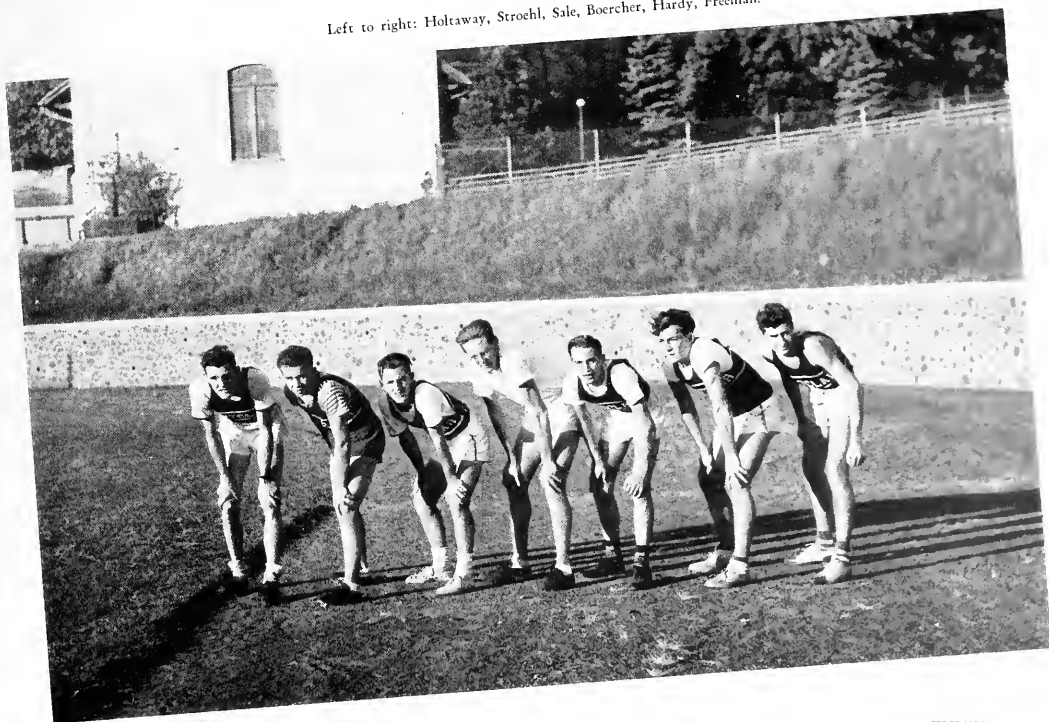

CROSS COUNTRY

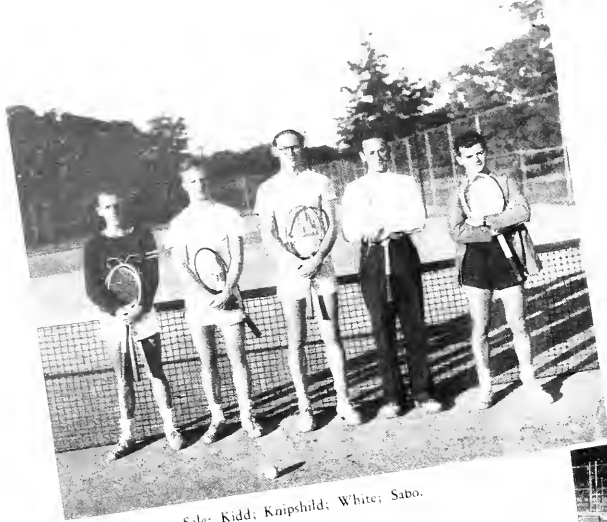

Graduation losses and lack of new material were the main factors responsible for the unproductive results of the cross country team this year. Coach Voliva, after trying his team out against an outside club, decided that the squad wasn't strong enough for intercollegiate competition.

Voliva had previously turned out teams which were among the best in the school. His cross-country team the year before had gone undefeated against a slate consisting of such teams as Temple, Princeton and Rutgers. This was the last hill and dale aggregation that Voliva had before he was inducted into the army.

TENNIS

With Captain Byron Kirk and little Chic Sale leading an inexperienced tennis team, Montclair won two games of a six game schedule. The bright spots were the 8-1 victory over Newark Teachers and a win over the New York School of Commerce.

The experience gained in taking setbacks from Upsala, Wagner, East Stroudsburg, and Trenton ought to bear fruit in other seasons. Byron Kirk was the only senior on the squad, and a remaining nucleus around which to build for the future are sophomores, Rodney White and Jim Knipshild, freshman Ed Schiller, and junior Chic Sale.

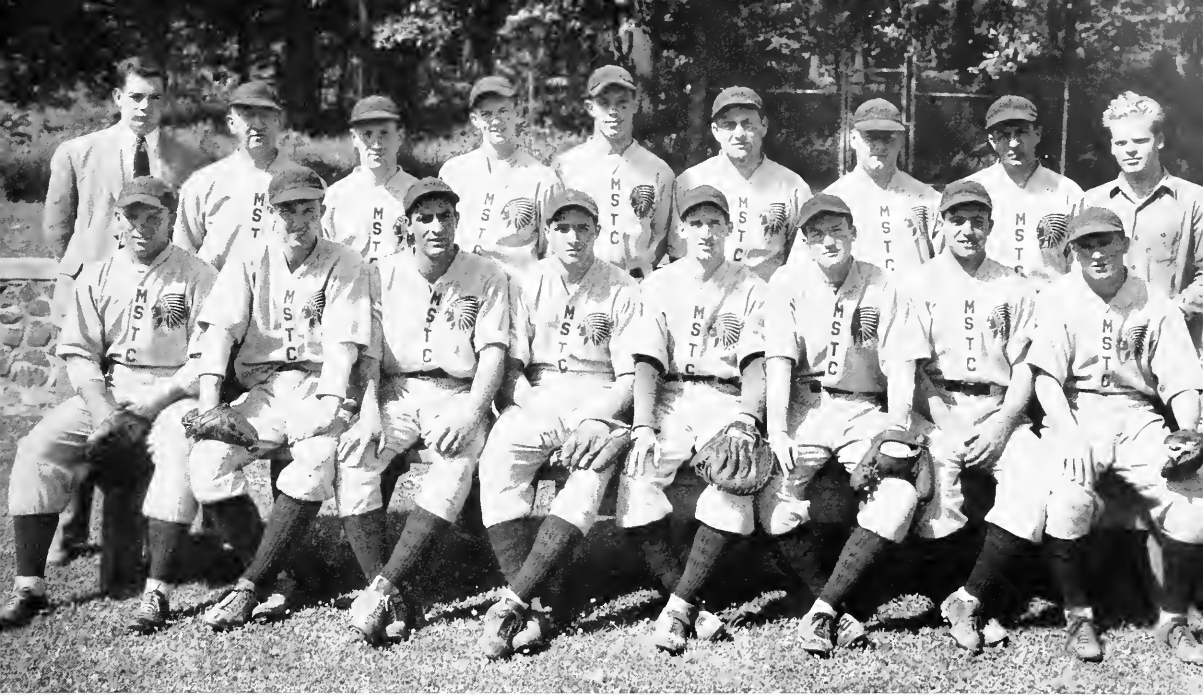

TRACK

Track really stole the limelight at Montclair last spring. First of all, Montclair held its own Invitation Track and Field Meet, displacing the old Metropolitan Class B Championships, and then won it from a field of nine competing colleges.

No less important was Montclair's fine record recorded over the course of six dual meets. The Tribe dashed to five straight victories after an opening season set back by Westchester Teachers. The most thrilling engagement was the one with C.C.N.Y. when the meet wasn't decided until the final javelin event which senior Hal Fiedler won. The final score was 64½ to 60½.

BASEBALL—1941

Only one veteran, catcher Charles Savelli, was missing from the previous season as the Indians prepared for their 1941 campaign with great expectations. They had big-league prospect, Lou Fishman, for pitcher, and Frank Steinitz, converted from short stop to catcher, was taking to his duties in an accomplished fashion. They got off to a discouraging start by dropping two games to a strong Bergen Junior college team, but they came to life in their next three games to play the best they did that season. The final results were six games won and five lost.

FENCING

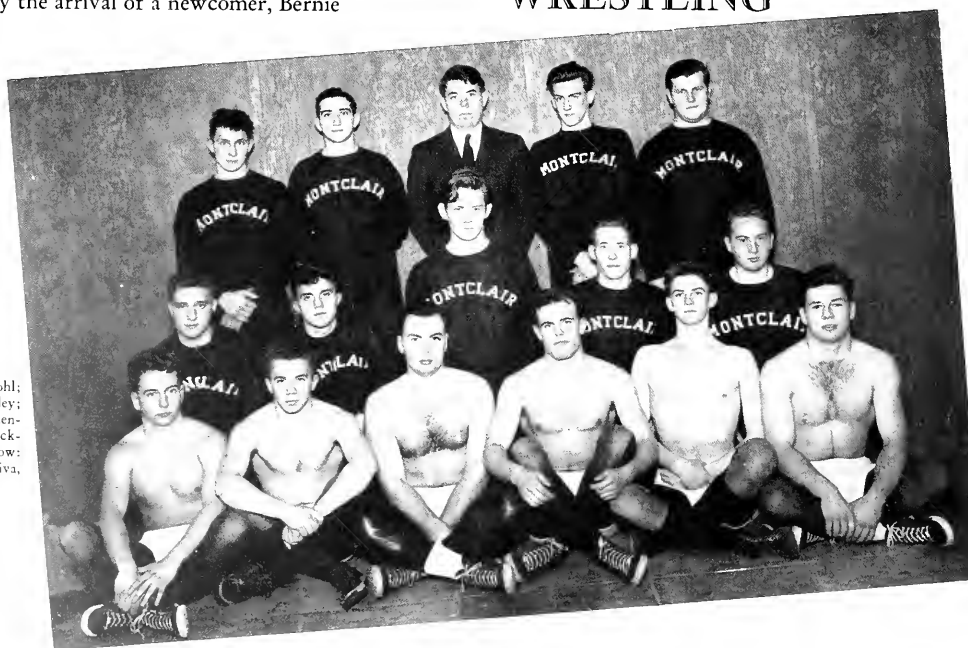

Another successful season for the Montclair fencers can be attributed to a great extent to the coaching and personal victories of Captain Steve Sabo. Steve, after four years of service to the squad, can look back upon an almost perfect record of wins in foils as well as in saber and epee. Although the loss of Steve will be a setback for the team, those skills which he has handed down to his team mates will carry the squad to future victories.

With Sabo and veteran Bob Longden forming a nucleus, the Montclair fencing team was rounded out by the arrival of a newcomer, Bernie Bauer.

Montclair's matmen started off the season with a win over Brooklyn Polytech. This successful start, however, did not presage a successful season. In the next five matches Montclair was beaten.

Ben Jagiello broke his winning streak, after fourteen victories, he lost one. This made his record one of fifteen wins out of sixteen starts. He also captured five out of six verdicts in his two years of grappling. This year the team was hindered greatly by the departure of Coach Voliva for the army.

SOFTBALL

Softball provides an active outdoor sport for girls during the Spring season. The players are divided into two teams, the American and the National. This promotes keen competition and good sportsmanship. The best players from this preliminary series are chosen for the Red and White teams which play off a series of games to determine the softball championship.

Volleyball, a fast-moving, interesting sport, has more participants than any other W.A.A. activity. Every class is represented by its class teams. This year the sophomores took the lead away from the seniors and went on to win the class championship. From all these players the Red and White teams were chosen, and the contest ended in a tie.

ARCHERY

The Montclair women's archery season opened this year on March 23rd. After a period of six weeks, these sharpshooters strive for the bar award. With practice and experience in archery in their required Physical Education classes, the girls are well prepared and skilled for the spring season.

The big targets and our poised archers are a familiar sight on the hill by College High. This preparation is for the Newark Annual Intercollegiate Invitation Tournament at Branchwood Park. This event is the highlight of the year. Participants are students from many of the nearby metropolitan colleges. The afternoon tournament is followed by an informal banquet for the contestants in the evening. Among those who shot this year were Hope Horton, Muriel Mowry, Mollie Collins, Rita Daniels, Jennie Canfora, Ann Weber, and Charlotte Wiel.

The Intercollegiate Winter Mail Tournament is held during the winter. Each of the four State Teachers Colleges participating shoots and then submits its scores by mail. This year, the Montclair team shot at the Robin Hood Archery Company Range at Newark for their Mail Tournament.

HOCKEY

This year a large number of participants were attracted to hockey which provides the girls with active outdoor sport during the Fall season, develops skill, and brings forth feelings of good sportsmanship in competition.

Six-man hockey was introduced this year instead of eleven. Beside interclass games, the team played Panzer College and College High.

Basketball, next to volleyball, is one of the most popular sports on the W.A.A. schedule. It encourages good sportsmanship and is the main athletic activity for girls during the winter season. The traditional class games were followed by the contests of the Red and White teams which were composed of the best players of the season. This year, games were played with Panzer, Newark, and Trenton.
